

Olive Tabor, a faithful member of the Cleveland Congress of Bridge Clubs, and a charter member of the Burke Club, organized in 1972. Olive enjoyed a life of meaningful involvement in political and social endeavors.

She was bailiff for Judge Lillian Burke for 12 years; on the board of the Cleveland chapter of the NAACP, as well as Karamu Theater; co-founder of the Cleveland Restoration Society; a staunch political campaigner, and an event planner for political celebratory occasions; President of Cleveland Congress of Bridge Clubs; director for Cleveland Congress and games sponsored by private social groups. And everything was done with that special Tabor flair.
